

Leopold And Franziska Brodmann Together With Friends At The Danube River In Vienna After The War

That's my parents, Leopold and Franziska Brodmann, together with friends at the Danube river in Vienna after the war.

For ten years, I hadn't heard anything from my parents. I knew that they were in Shanghai, but I didn't receive any letters.

It wasn't possible; we were at war. They returned to Vienna in 1947; I went back in 1954.

My father, who was still relatively young, went back to working as a sales representative for the textile industry.
