

Faina Khorunzhenko's Mother's Relatives And Friends

A picture of my mother's relatives and friends - a large Jewish company. On the left is my mother's sister Sofia Zamb; sitting first on the left is mother's brother Ruvim Zamb; sitting last on the right is Grigory Zamb. The rest are their friends. The photo was taken in Golta before the revolution, approximately in 1915. My mother had three brothers - Mikhail, Grigory, and Ruvim. She also had a sister. I don't remember anything else. My mother was the youngest. My mother's older brother Grigory fought in World War I and was demobilized in 1916 due to a wound. Later he found a job in Pervomaisk. After the death of my grandfather he took my mother into his own family. But my mother did not like it there because Grigory's wife Asya had no love for her.
