

Feiga And Govshia Loshak

This is my father, Govshia Loshak, with his mother, Feiga. My grandparents stayed in Berdichev during the war. They suffered the destiny of all Berdichev Jews. When the Germans entered Berdichev, they gathered all the remaining Jews and shot them at the old fortress. My father finished only elementary school. He 'inherited' the profession of repairing sewing machines. My parents kept Jewish traditions and holidays, but they were not religious. Around 1936, my mother, Sarah Raygorodetskaya, began to work at the passport department in the city police department. Because of her official position, she was afraid to go to the synagogue. I remember well that after the war people were watched, and my mother was always afraid that somebody would learn that we celebrated Passover or other Jewish holidays at home.
