

Ninel Cherevko's Grandmother Bertha Shwartz's Younger Sister Anna Deitorovich With Her Friend

Anna Lutrovnik, grandmother Bertha's younger sister on the right and her friend. Photo made in Voznesensk in 1914 after Anna returned to Paris after WWI. Anna was born in 1889. After finishing grammar school Anna entered the medical faculty of the university in Sorbonne in Paris. She studied several years there. At the beginning of WWI Anna returned to Russia. She stayed with her parents in Evpatoria for some time before she moved to her sister in Voznesensk. Anna liked her brother-in-law Mark, her sister's Sopia's husband, a lot and never dated with young men of her age. In 1919 Sopia took a lethal dose of some medication and died of poisoning. There were rumors that she had left a letter for Mark where she wrote that she had been in love with another man for several years and poisoned herself seeing no way out of this situation. Anna stayed with her brother-in-law and in a year they registered their marriage at a registry office. Anna didn't change her nee name of Lutrovnik to her husband's. She adopted Sopia's daughter Irina and raised her. They didn't have any more children. Shortly after their wedding Anna, Mark and Irina moved to Moscow - there were too many rumors in Voznesensk about their family. In Moscow Mark got a job at a photo shop and Anna worked as a medical nurse. During the Great patriotic War Anna and mark stayed in Moscow, but Irina evacuated. She became a chemical engineer. Mark died in late 1940s. Anna died in 1954. Irina became a scientist and a great specialist in non-organic chemistry. She was single. She died in Moscow in 1994.
